

This image makes up a clickable navigation menu.

You can view a PRINTER FRIENDLY version of this article here.

Women and the Silent Screen: Panel 16

New Histories / New Methods | Histoire nouvelle, méthodes nouvelles

by Lisa Fotheringham

27 September 2004 | N/A words

The third international Women and the Silent Screen Congress was held in 2004 from the second through the sixth of June at Concordia University in Montreal. We present here Panel 16, held Saturday June 5th, 10:45 am in the Garbo Salon. The panel, entitled New Histories/New Methods, featured presentations by Christine Gledhill of Staffordshire University, Rosanna Maule of Concordia University, and Tom Gunning of the University of Chicago. The panel chair was Martin Lefebvre.

NOTE:Christine Gledhill's presentation and Tom Gunning's presentation (parts 1 and 3) are FLASH slideshows: audio accompanied by still images. If the audio should pause while you are viewing the clip, please be patient as it continues to download. It will start again momentarily.

Tom Gunning: "Light, Motion, Cinema: The Heritage of Loie Fuller and Germaine Dulac"

Synopsis: Tom Gunning charts the profound aesthetic influence of dancer Loie Fuller on the experimental filmmaker Germaine Dulac, suggesting a deep kinship between the birth of cinema, the extravagance of art nouveau, and a burgeoning modernity.

This article will be published, in a much expanded form, in an upcoming edition of Framework.

Click Here for Part 1 of Tom Gunning's Presentation

Part 2 of Tom Gunning's presentation is commentary he delivered while showing Dulac's film Arabesque. Clicking on the following link will load the Real Video Player. If you need to download the Real Video Player, click here.

Click Here for Part 2 of Tom Gunning's presentation

Click Here for part 3, the brief conclusion, of Tom Gunning's presentation

Christine Gledhill: "Reframing Women in 1920s British Cinema"

Synopsis: Christine Gledhill examines the importance of the experiences of two women film pioneers in understanding the history of early British Cinema: Violet Hopson, and Dinah Shurey (Britain's first woman director).

Christine Gledhill has not informed us about what future plans she has for this article.

Click Here for Christine Gledhill's Presentation

Rosanna Maule: "Une histoire sans noms : pour une révision du concept d'auteur dans le cinéma des premiers temps"

Synopsis: Providing a comprehensive overview of the main theories of authorship in film studies, Rosanna Maule's article argues that the notion of authorship needs to be redefined, and that the study of women filmmakers from the silent era offer important strategies in that redefinition. Includes examination of the work of Francois Jost, Jane Gaines, Sandy Flitterman-Lewis, and others. IN FRENCH. Real Audio only.

This article will be published in an upcoming edition of CiNéMAS.

Click Here for Rosanna Maule's presentation

Due to technical difficulties, we were unable to reproduce the question and answer period. Which is too bad.

<http://articles.synoptique.ca/wscreen/>

<<< :: Previous entry
The Stepford Wives

Next entry :: >>>
Tribeca? –Or not

 [Back to Top ]